Excerpt: .other projected improvements completed, with military expenses reduced, as may be with increased facilities of communication and transportation, with continuance of wise, stable, and honest administration of public trusts, as at present, the future prosperity of Mexico, based upon sound financial conditions, must be assured. Such results have already become largely demonstrated by consummated facts and conditions; and the continuance In support of this, I append the following communication, with thanks to the writer, who is a painstaking and able statistician and reliable authority. J. H. R. May 7, 1888. Hon. JOHN H. RrcE, NEW Yonx. MY DEAR. SIR: In reply to your inquiries of this morning, it gives me pleasure to say that the subvention due from the Mexican Government to the Mexicali NationalConstruction Company is being collected with promptness and accuracy, and has been so collected ever since June 30, 1886, when...
