Excerpt from Shakespeariana, Vol. 3: August, 1886 Now what is the attraction for the artist when he selects subjects so characterized by enormity, we might say, of the unreasonable IS it that he loves darkness rather than light, that evil deeds constitute so large an element of his creations And is it because men in general love darkness rather than light, that they sympathize so deeply with such themes when treated by a great master Certainly not. The artist does not employ, and men are not interested in, moral darkness for its own sake this the most depraved would not be willing to admit; but the attractive element and the real basis of their sympathy is the light which struggles with, and is intensified by the darkness.
