Reviews

Simply no phrases to clarify. It is really basic but surprises from the 50 percent of the ebook. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

If the outer end is well protected in this way, the dam is rarely injured. The training wall consists of two rows of piles 6 ft. apart, driven 8 ft. between centers, rilled with brush from any live timber. The bottom layer is made of saplings fastened with wire in sections 30 ft. long, placed at right angles to the current, projecting 15 ft. in front and 9 ft. in rear of the wall. This layer is loaded with stone or gravel. Above this are packed tiers of brush cross-ways to the first, between the piles to their tops, which are left 4 ft. above low tide. The piles are then bound together in both directions near their tops with No. 12 galvanized wire wound around them six times. When the brush settles with the silt which fills it, more is added, the transverse wires being temporarily removed for the purpose. The wall is then gradually loaded and revetted from excavation. In this way both dams and walls become embankments of imperishable material, the core alone being the original structure. The piles, except as stated, are the ordinary second growth pine of the vicinity, and the timber, except for wales and braces, is of good merchantable pine. Some of the wing dams are 17 years old and a9 efficient as ever. Several have been shortened by freshets, owing to insufficient...
