The trip was made by automobile, eight large touring cars furnishing transportation. The start was made at the Public Library and the first stopping place was the old Mastuxet graveyard, a place of much historic interest, as it is near the homes of the first white settlers of the town, and contains the dust of many persons of prominence in Colonial days. An hour was spent in visiting the graves and deciphering inscriptions on the mossy stones. A brief service was fittingly held about the tombstones of the Babcock family, and a poem, commemorating the early settlers was read by Mr. Ethan Wilcox. The party then proceeded by way of the Shore Road, obtaining fine views of the ocean and of the beautiful ponds which line the shores. A swift passage along the Post Road gave a fleeting glimpse of farm lands, once the great estates of the Stanton and Champlin families. A conspicuous object on the wayside is the monument of Col. Joseph Stanton, long a distinguished citizen of Charlestown. Through the courtesy of the owners of the King Tom Farm, the long line of automobiles swept in through the open gates of the fine country seat, once the home of the royal family of the Narragansett Tribe, and a cordial welcome was extended to the Westerly Historical Society by the gracious lady of the Manor, Mrs. E. K. Wilkinson. The estate passed from...
