Excerpt from The Latter-Day Saints Millennial Star, Vol. 65: April 23, 1903 Now, I do not desire to prolong my remarks this morning. I pray God to bless those who may speak to us and inspire them to say those things that will be instructive and beneficial, and that we all may enjoy that measure of the spirit of intelligence that we may divine rightly the word of truth, and that we all may receive meat in due season. That God may grant us these privileges and blessings is my prayer, in the name of Jesus. Amen. Elder seymour B. Young, of the First Seven Presidents of Seventies, was the next speaker. He was grateful to the Lord for the prosperity that attends the Saints everywhere. He had a testimony to bear - the same testimony that he had always borne. He rejoiced in the fact that our young people had so many opportunities of advancement and culture. Yet he regretted that there was so little manual training in our system of education. President Brigham Young used to teach this idea as a necessary part of every educational system. In speaking thus, Elder Young explained that he was not inclined to find fault with what the noble and devoted men and women were doing for our young people, both in our Church schools and in the auxiliary organizations of the Church. But he felt nevertheless that we ought to do more in the way of teaching manual training than we do. Our schools will always remain incomplete until they have departments where the mechanical arts are taught. Throughout our communities the Saints are in comparative comfort. In our outlying settlements it...
