Excerpt: . up from the status of craftsmen to that of artists and litterateurs. Let me give you a few memoranda. As a reward for a certain amount of energy and labour in the office of Conductor of our University Choral Society which I had displayed (or which, at least, my friends believed I had), I was offered the degrees of Mus.B. and Mus.D. by accumulation, if I would write the required exercises, all other expenses, fees, robes, c., being guaranteed me. Of course I was much complimented, and I set to work and wrote an exercise for each. This occurred in 1851. The scores (full) were politely returned to me by the then Professor (Dr. J. Smith) when (as I was bound to) I submitted them to his judgment. Dr. Smith died in 1861, and I, who had been organist to the College...
