Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Excerpt from From Paddington to Penzance: The Record of a Summer Tramp From London to the Land s End This man, willing to be convinced of the pleasure and the healthful profit of touring afoot, yet loth to try so grand a specific for varied ills, delayed long and faltered much between yea and nay ere he was finally pledged to the trip but a time for decision comes at last, even to the most vacillating, and at length we set out together on this leisured tour. It was time. When we left London the spirit of the silly season roamed abroad, and made men mad: the novelists were explaining diffusely in the columns of the public press why they wrote no plays the playwrights were giving the retort discourteous (coram publico) to the effect that the novelists had all the will but didn t know how, and the factions between them made any amount of copy for the enterprising editor who looked on and, so to speak, winked the other eye while the combatants contended. Unsuccessful Parliamentary candidates were counting the cost of their electoral struggles, and muttering melodramatic prophecies of a time will come; the eager journalist wandered about Fleet Street, seeking news and finding none, for the Building Societies had not yet begun to collapse and the chiefest streets of town were up.
