Excerpt from Social Dancing Inconsistent With a Christian Profession and Baptismal Vows: A Sermon, Preached in the Presbyterian Church, Columbia, S. C., June 17, 1849 Beloved brethren: The following Discourse, delivered in your hearing a few Sabbaths since, is now submitted to your perusal at the earnest and united request of the Church Session. I desire here to record publicly my thanksgiving to God that the sentiments herein advanced have met your almost universal approval. Thus have I been saved from my fears; as the Sermon was preached with much weakness and trembling. In this I rejoice the more, as it gives assurance that, so far as vain pleasures are concerned, you will strive in your behaviour to put a visible difference between those that belong unto the Church and the rest of the world 5 aiming to live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present evil world, and making no provision to the flesh to fulfil the lusts thereof.
