EUROPE'S ESTABLISHED AND EMERGING IMMIGRANT COMMUNITIES: ASSIMILATION, MULTICULTURALISM OR INTEGRATION

Trentham Books, 2009. Soft cover. Condition: New. Europe is not what it used to be, and not yet what it will be. The assassination of Theo van Gogh in November 2004, the 2001 riots in the Northern cities of England, the riots in France in November 2005 and the incident of the Danish Cartoons in 2005 are all manifestations of mainstream Europe's struggle to reconfigure itself. The rapidly changing demographics, especially after post World War Two immigration, have led to what has been called a "European identity crisis". This has raised significant social, political, economic, security and cultural questions over how "established" and emerging immigrant communities are managed, even though some in these communities hold citizenship in European countries. This book brings leading writers in their fields to explore a range of issues concerning Europe's established and emerging immigrant communities: religion, health, housing, refugees and asylum seekers, working in post-conflict ethnic zones, community cohesion in rural areas, security, Gypsies and Travellers. The first part of the book looks at such topics across Europe while the second explores specific issues using the UK as a microcosm. Readers will find a wide range of perspectives based on empirical research and grounded in critical analyses, as well as responses to the new challenges confronting Europe. The strength of the book lies in its timeliness and wide appeal: it is essential reading for social science courses including community development, sociology, politics, social policy, diversity, health, education and international development at both undergraduate and post graduate level. And policy makers and practitioners will treasure the book's historical and contemporary insights into how the geography of Europe has been shaped and how policies continue to be largely focused on the racialization of people.
