Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Excerpt from Archaeological and Natural History, Vol. 17: Society s Proceedings, 1871 I would here give one caution. I do not in the least recommend that he who undertakes the illustration of some particular local subject should of necessity preface it with an introduction going back to the creation of the world, or even to the landing of Caesar. This is the kind of thing which antiquaries of the elder school were in the constant habit of doing. Nothing was ever more hopeless than the result. Sketches of general history, attempted by men who had never learned to take a general View of anything, are far less to the purpose than the pettiest local detail. A man had better stick to measurements and pedigrees than tell over again, at every place he comes to, the same dull ceaseless repetition about Britons and Romans and Danes and Saxons and Normans, the whole series of the revolutions of our island being gone through on each occasion, and gone through with very much less of life than some of our friends know how to put into...
