Transcriptional Control of Neural Crest Lineage

By Brian L. Nelms

Morgan & Claypool Publishers. Paperback. Condition: New. 240 pages. Dimensions: 9.1in. x 7.4in. x 0.7in. The neural crest is a remarkable embryonic population of cells found only in vertebrates and has the potential to give rise to many different cell types contributing throughout the body. These derivatives range from the mesenchymal bone and cartilage comprising the facial skeleton, to neuronal derivatives of the peripheral sensory and autonomic nervous systems, to melanocytes throughout the body, and to smooth muscle of the great arteries of the heart. For these cells to correctly progress from an unspecified, nonmigratory population to a wide array of dynamic, differentiated cell types—some of which retain stem cell characteristics presumably to replenish these derivatives—requires a complex network of molecular switches to control the gene programs giving these cells their defining structural, enzymatic, migratory, and signaling capacities. This review will bring together current knowledge of neural crest-specific transcription factors governing these progressions throughout the course of development. A more thorough understanding of the mechanisms of transcriptional control in differentiation will aid in strategies designed to push undifferentiated cells toward a particular lineage, and unraveling these processes will help toward reprogramming cells from a differentiated to a more...

This is the finest publication we have read through right up until now. Better than never, though I am quite late in starting to read this one. It has been written in a remarkably easy way in fact it is only after I finished reading through this book that I basically altered me, affected the way I think.
