Just Write Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Walk through the childhood days of this Maine native and author reflecting life growing up before technology invaded our lives. The author honors her parents and the engaged lifestyle they gave to her and three sisters living on the family farm in Albany Township, Maine, during the 1940s and 1950s. Outside physical play, interactions with nature, opportunities to make do, inspiring thought and imagination provided the foundation of youth--missing in today s childhood days. A passion for attics and anything old cultivated a love of collecting. Family artifacts help tell inspirational stories connecting to her roots and experiences that reveal who she is today. Readers will enjoy hearing the adventures of collecting, the agonies of trials and the fears and interactions with creatures on the farm. Through these stories, the advantages of self-sustaining living are explored. Examine the many ways of stimulating a child s development through inspirational family adventures. Norma Salway, retired educator, parent, and grandparent, is the author of three other books, The Spirit of Songo, Touched by a Hummingbird, and I m Just a Kid, You Know! Salway and her sister, Dottie Adams also present Vintage Oral History programs and displays featuring their mom s aprons, linens, and clothing. Salway volunteers at The ReStore for Habitat For Humanity and lives in Portland, Maine with her cat, Gusty.
