Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The American Cyclopeda, Vol. 40: A Popular Dictionary of General Knowledge; Magnetism-Motril Agnetism, the name given to the phenom ena displayed by magnets. If a bar of slightly tempered steel be held vertically and struck several blows with a wooden mallet, it will acquire the property of attracting iron filings at its two extremities. The same prop erty maybe communicated from one bar of steel to any number of similar bars, by rub bing one half of the length of each of the lat ter with the end of the former which was to ward the earth in the experiment above men tioned, and the remaining half with the other N. S. N. 8. N S N. S N S. No end of the same bar. In this process a remark able fact becomes evident, namely, that the bar which is employed to impart the magnetic pizoperty loses noneof its own power; on the contrary, if the process is properly performed, it will become stronger; and hence we deduce the conclusion, that in magnetization there is no transfer of any substance from...
