Excerpt from Western Electrician, Vol. 19: July 4-December 26, 1896 Coming now to a consideration of the subject of this paper, it is not unreasonable to augur from the success of the electric railway in the past an outlook for the future equally brilliant and promising. We may leave out of consideration the work which still remains to be done in affording rapid transit for the cities and towns, which are as yet either working without street railways altogether, or in which the existing systems are still operated as horse or cable roads. The horse as a propulsive agent for the street car is steadily pursuing his course to his destined place in the museum, while the cable, in spite of the tremendous inertia of invested capital, is except in the most congested portions of the larger cities, rapidly giving way before the greater economy of electrical operation. The recent electrical equipment of the extensive Pittsburg cable systems, involving the abandonment of an investment of many millions of dollars, may be instanced in this connection.
