Excerpt from Developments in the Manufacture of Fine Writing Paper: A Thesis Submitted for the Degree of Bachelor of Science, General Engineering Course, University of Wisconsin, 1903 It is impossible to state when the art of writing commenced. Before its use, songs, traditions, trees, heaps of stone, altars, and pillars were used to keep up recollection of past facts. Inscriptions on stones, wood and metals were used for public records, and leaves and barks of trees for private purposes. Job mentions the use of stone, which was also used by the early Danes. Later, bricks were also used. We are told the Ten Commandments were written on marble slabs. The first known Chinese writing was on stone. Lead replaced stone and bricks and was itself replaced by bronze. The speech of Claudius written on bronze plates is still preserved in the town hall of Lyons, France. Wood and ivory were next used and were superseded by the leaves of the palm, olive, poplar, and other trees. Next the bark of the elder, elm and birch were used.
