M. , the tubes were revolved 165 times per second for 30 seconds. Upon examination it was found that whereas the normal eggs were completely stratified, not a sign of stratification could be observed in the eggs which had been exposed to distilled water. Evidently endosmosis, following immersion in distilled water, leads to a gelatinization or coagulation in the cytoplasm. This effect is also produced when endosmosis follows a lowered surface tension of the plasma membrane. A drop of egg suspension was stirred up with a drop of chloroform, and the eggs rapidly increased in diameter. When subjected to the pressure of a piece of glass broken from a slide, the eggs flattened out but remained perfectly circular in outline. The same result was obtained if toluol was used instead of chloroform. The eggs under pressure behave like eggs which have been coagulated by some typical coagulant, c. g. , HgCl<sub>2</sub>. On the other hand, when the normal eggs were subjected to the pressure of the same piece of glass, the cytoplasm flowed out a considerable distance. The results obtained with the centrifuging method are still more convincing. At 10: 025 A. M. (July 23, 1914), 2. 5 c. c. of toluol were added to 2. 5 c. c. of sea-water containing eggs, and the mixture was stirred thoroughly with a glass rod (in a Syracuse watch-crystal). At 10: 075 A. M. , 7 drops of the...
