Reviews

Here is the finest publication we have read right up until now. It is actually written in easy words instead of difficult to understand. It has been written in a remarkably easy way in fact it is only right after I finished reading this book in which basically changed me, modified the way I really believe.

Penguin, New Delhi, India, 2008. Paperback. Book Condition: New. First Edition. 'Kwai-Yun Lis debut collection . . . about being Chinese in 1950s India, proves her a natural story-teller. On a hot summer day in 1942, sitting outside her shoe shop in Bentinck Street, a mother fixes her six-year-old daughter's marriage to her neighbour's son. A widow converts a part of her house to a temple so that she can support her family with the donations. During a border skirmish in the north-east, Chinese mothers prepare packages for life in concentration camps giving special instructions to the children, lest they get separated. A gentle bookseller and his daughter disappear in the middle of the night when they are deported to China for his political sympathies. And in the delightful story Uncle Worry, Uncle Chien worries when his daughter Pi Moi forgets to call him: he worries that she and her husband, Mohamed, have had a falling out. He worries when Pi Moi does call, for she must be fighting with Mohamed, otherwise why would she call? Even though there is so much a story of assimilation and syncretism growing up in 1950s Calcutta one never paid much attention to which customs were Indian or Chinese the Chinese have often felt the brunt of their foreignness. The rift between Mao and Chiang Kai Shek led to the deportation and imprisonment of hundreds of Maoist sympathizers. This collection gives voice to...
