Not illustrated. 1915 Excerpt: .this a number of club rooms are open in cities where there are sufficient number of sailors wintering to justify their establishment. These assembly or club rooms are supplied with standard magazines, ranging in character from fiction and humor to those dealing with technical subjects, together with daily papers and facilities for writing and receiving letters. The means of entertainment cover a wide range, such as cards, checkers and chess, while some of the rooms are supplied with pool and billiard tables. All of them have Victrolas with a circulating library of well assorted records consisting principally of the higher forms of music. Many of the rooms are supplied with shower baths, and all of them afford. checking facilities for baggage. All of the rooms are furnished comfortably and attractively, and are kept in a clean, cheerful and sanitary condition by the custodians. All of these privileges are furnished to the men for the nominal charge of $1.00 per year. The Lake Carriers Association would be glad to bear the whole expense of maintaining these rooms but experience has demonstrated that it is wise to charge a nominal fee, in order that the men may take a proprietary interest in the rooms and not feel that they are in any way accepting any charity, which might be lessening to their self-respect. There are also included in the registration grades for masters, chief engineers, mates and assistant engineers. The fees for the registration of the officers are...
