The city was practically a collection of isolated villages widely separated and at certain seasons almost inaccessible. In the vicinity of the Navy Yard, the Arsenal, the Capitol and the President's House, as many communities had sprung into existence through the necessities of public business. Under such circumstances social entertainments were of rare occurrence and imposed upon the participants no small degree of inconvenience. This condition of things is now changed. The Capital, within a few days ride of the remotest sections of the country, with its beautiful parks, broad avenues and...
