Excerpt: . . . case against Limoges, made a serious error. In any case, on the night of the escapade and of the alleged offence, as well as at the time the information was laid, the child had not yet been convicted, so it is difficult to see what relevancy the conviction possessed except possibly under the words contributing and becoming as used in section 29 of the Act. The allegations in the affidavits that the first adjournment to the 24th of October was for the purpose of giving judgment are not contradicted and are indeed confirmed by the magistrates use of the words referring to what he did on the 29th-- I open the case. It seems to be clear under the authorities that this is fatal to a conviction. My view of the proper interpretation of section 29, if it were necessary to express a definite opinion,...
