Sources: Homeland Security Presidential Directive 7 and the National Strategy for Homeland Security. In its plan for protecting these critical infrastructures, DHS recognizes that the Internet is a key resource composed of assets within both the 9 information technology and the telecommunications sectors. It notes that the Internet is used by all sectors to varying degrees, and that it provides information and communications to meet the needs of businesses, government, and the other critical infrastructure sectors. Similarly, the national cyberspace strategy states that cyberspace is the nervous system supporting our nations critical infrastructures and recognizes the Internet 10 as the core of our information infrastructure. It is also important to note that there are critical interdependencies between sectors. For example, the telecommunications and information technology sectors, like many other sectors, depend heavily on the energy sector. In recent years, cyber attacks involving malicious software or hacking have Attacks on the Information been increasing in frequency and complexity. These attacks can come from Infrastructure Are a variety of actors. Table 2 lists sources of cyber threats that have been Increasing id...
