Createspace, United States, 2012. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Author Sylvia Duncan bases her novel around the life and times of her great-grandmother, who was born into an ambitious, high-spirited pioneer family carving their homestead from the northern Indiana wilderness. This is the story of how Miriam faced loss, found love, and became a strong woman with Christian faith and family as her enduring legacy. As a deeply committed and independent-minded woman, she rode her horse, Clover, in all hours of the day and night to assist with childbirth and sickness in order to fulfill her pledge to be of service to her community her whole life through. Her herbal treatments, learned at her mother's knee, brought healing and comfort to those in need. At the end of her life, she thought of how the world had turned so many times since her birth, bringing new ideas and inventions into little Whitley County each day, it seemed. She had lived to see the telegraph and now the telephone; the horse and buggy and now the horseless carriage; the kerosene lamp and now the electric bulb; the log cabin and now the lovely mansions in town. There were flying machines that would ply the air over Whitley County before too long. What marvels these all were-- and so many more to come. . She hoped and prayed that her grandchildren would live lives as fulfilling as hers had been, and that they would, above all, find love and raise good, strong, educated children in this land of opportunity. This uplifting book shows the power of the individual to make a great contribution to American society.our unsung heroes who labor faithfully, selflessly, and with integrity to make this country great. Author Duncan writes,...
