William Henry Harrison, Late President of the United States, a Member of the National Institution for the Promotion of Science: Delivered Before the Institution; June 24, 1841 His eldest son, Benjamin Harrison, was, during his life, which terminated on the 10th April, 1710, at the early age of thirty - seven years, distinguished in the history. Of the colony. he was by profession a lawyer, and is represented as eminent for his intelligence, learning, eloquence, and fidelity; the unwearied patron of widows, orphans, and of all the poor and oppressed; the arbiter and pacificator in all controversies and disputes; a most upright judge in all the litigations of the county; the stern avenger of impiety and iniquity, and a zealous promoter of the public good. Dying at Williamsburg while exercising the functions of Speaker of the House of Burgesses, the monument erected to his memory, bearing an inscription in Latin, of which the foregoing summary of his character is the translation of a part, is supposed to have been erected at the public expense. It appears, from the contemporaneous legislative records of Virginia, (3 Henning's Statutes at large, 538, that he was, at the period of his death, treasurer of the public impositions; that he possessed considerable wealth, having died the proprietor in fee simple of twenty thousand acres of land, besides a large personal estate, the administration of which devolved upon his widow, a daughter of Lewis Burwell, of Gloucester. He left one son and one daughter. The son, also named Benjamin, likewise appears to have been a man of high respectability of character,...
