Excerpt from Contributions to the Analysis of the Sensations: With Thirty-Seven Cuts For the preparation of the present excellent translation of my Beitrge zur Analyse der Empfindungen I am under profound obligations to The Open Court Publishing Company Not a little of the progress of psychology is owing to the strenuous efforts which the promoters of the science have made to find the main explanation of its problems in the principle of association and these investigations have received a fresh impulse from the results of neural anatomy and neural physiology. I am of opinion however, that the idea advanced in the present work, agreeably to which as many physico-chemical neural processes are to be assumed as there are distinguishable qualities of sensation, is also possessed of heuristic value, and that there is reasonable hope that at some future time it, too, will receive elucidation from the side of physiological chemistry. Admittedly, this idea, which is but a consistent, monistic conception of Muller s principle of the specific energies, is not in accord with prevailing notions. By the example and influence of a great authority it has become the custom to relegate the explanation of different qualities of sensation to unknown domains, and to regard all neural processes as absolutely alike qualitatively and only quantitatively different.
