Excerpt from A Summary of Current Program, 10/1/66, and Preliminary Report of Progress for 9/1/65 to 10/1/66 Farm production economics research, as used in this report, deals with many and varied economic problems of agricultural production. The work is concerned with the economics of organization and management of farms, use of capital and labor in agriculture, production and conservation practices, adjustments in production and resource use, farm financial problems of credit and insurance, and appraisal of alternative production policies and programs. A continuing major problem in agriculture is the adjustment of production, both in the aggregate and for major commodities, to market outlets. Achievement of economic balance in agriculture and adequate returns to farmers is likely to continue to be difficult over the next 5 to 10 years as we strive to match the increasing capacity of agriculture to produce with the food and fiber requirements of a larger U. S. Population and expanding outlets for exports and Food for Peace programs. Farms are decreasing in number and increasing in size and degree of specialization. Farm machinery, fertilizers, and other innovations, are substituting for land and labor. Coupled with rising farmland values, these developments necessitate large and increasing capital investments per farm, and alter farm credit and insurance needs. Increasing dependence on purchased inputs and on cash markets for products make net income increasingly vulnerable to changes in prices of both inputs and outputs. These trends challenge the most rigorous research in the field of farm economics. Results of research in this field are widely used as aids in management and policy decisions at the farm, area, regional, State, and national levels.
