We argue that, while existing integration strategies might provide satisfactory support for small or static systems, their inadequacies rapidly become evident in large-scale interoperable database systems operating in a dynamic environment. The frequent entry and exit of heterogeneous interoperating agents renders frozen interfaces (e.g., shared schemas) impractical and places an ever increasing burden on the system to accord more flexibility to heterogeneous users. User heterogeneity mandates that disparate users conceptual models and preferences must be accommodated, and the emergence of large-scale networks suggests that the integration strategy must be scalable and capable of dealing with evolving semantics. As an alternative to the integration approaches presented in the literature, we propose a strategy based on the notion of context interchange. In the context interchange framework, assumptions underlying the interpretations attributed to data are explicitly represented in the form of data contexts with...
