The largest Barbel I ever caught weighed 7 3 lbs., and it was taken by roach tackle in the deep just helow Teddington Weir. The fish spawn early in June: Walton says in April; hut perhaps they vary according to seasons and situations. They never cast spawn until the fifth or sixth year. The two most general modes of fishing for Barbel are with the ledger and the float; the former consists of a yard of gut, having four inches of gimp or coarse line in the middle, on which is placed a large bullet or lead, with a hole through its centre, which is kept in its position by a fixed shot at the end...
