Excerpt: . . . replied, Ill be hanged if there aint; Your word weighs nothing gainst that of a saint. He said, Search your pocket, the bag will be there, So dont act the humbug, but give me my share; Your pocket the money-bag plainly divulges, ust look for yourself--dont you see where it bulges The farmer protested the bag was his own, Stamped his foot, and bewailed with piteous moan; But he might have protested as well to a stone, -For the soldier compelled him to fork out his money-bag, As a schoolboy might plunder a bee of its honey-bag. But true to his contract, it must be confessed, He counted out fifty and gave him the rest. MORAL. Never tell lies, or perhaps youll get sold, And never go praying to statues for gold;, And if youve got money in gold or in notes, Dont stick...
