It will be my aim to show that we have in this product a new resource of great value and importance. I shall endeavour to point out the great intrinsic value of the kola-nut on account of its medicinal qualities, and more particularly on account of its adaptability to take a place by the side of coffee and chocolate as a beverage-substance, partaking as it does of the qualities of both these staple articles of our agriculture and commerce. I shall also notice the horticultural capabilities of the kola as a hardy tree of easy culture and as adapted to be grown extensively on large areas of unoccupied and otherwise unprofitable lands in Jamaica. Here, then, is a prospect full of interest and promise, which, if it can only be realised, will shed a ray of hope and be as a silver lining behind the cloud of agricultural depression that is still weighing so heavily on the sugar-planting and other rural interests in this island. It will be shown in the course of the remarks that this new beverage-substance may be produced on lands that are now of but little profit for sugar. The addition to our agricultural resources of a cultivation which, in all probability, is destined to take rank with that of coffee, whilst not demanding so much labour in its picking and preparation as the coffee-berry does, and which...
