By Carlene E. Thompson

Xlibris. Paperback. Condition: New. 94 pages. Dimensions: 8.8in. x 6.0in. x 0.3in. Well, gentle readers, I hope youve enjoyed your journey with me as much as I have telling you of it. There are many times that I fought technology; some of the time technology won. I had a listing for which twenty-five agents had shown, but no offers had been received. A gentleman and his wife, who were residents of London, England, saw the property listing in the Internet, made an offer, and flew into Houston and promptly closed on the home. Hooray for technology! Some of my most pleasant and enjoyable clients have been CEOs and their families, many of who were relocating from New York City. Most are amazed at the lovely houses that have been available at great prices, compared with the cost of homes in the New York area. Some of them have even sent referrals, which are always welcome and encouraged. In closing, I must tell you of one experience that will remain forever in my heart and mind-not all my experiences have been difficult or bizarre. There was a time, before attending real estate school, when I was absolutely awestricken by a beautiful home...
