

Masks: With an Introduction by Marge Piercy (Paperback)

By Professor Ruthann Robson

Leapfrog Press, 1999. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. Best Poetry of 1999-Library Journal Well known by readers of gay and lesbian fiction for her award-winning short story collections and novels; notorious in the legal profession as the nation's foremost authority on lesbians and law (Village Voice), a professor at the City University of New York, a young mother raising a son, Ruthann Robson's breadth of experience is unique among American poets. With seamless use of poetic craft and ironic wit, Robson tackles subjects as political as they are bizarre: the young woman chained to a radiator by her mother to keep her safe from harm; the teenager who gets herself knocked up because it's less dangerous to be an unwed mother than a lesbian. Affecting, terrifying, but always bathed in a clear hard light, these poems introduce a stunning intelligence and a bold new voice in American poetry. Ardent, passionate, and exquisitely queer. Robson's sense of playfulness is wonderful. The poems in Masks are startling not only for their quirky, often whimsical, humanity, but also for their imaginative use of form. There is history in this book. Witch burnings. Concentration camps....
