Gunnar Brume, a thirty-six year old adjunct professor of Late Modern History, lives a pleasantly mundane, albeit somewhat lonely existence in a city on the US East Coast, where he teaches a course on WWII at a local University. One summer afternoon, while watching the Euro Cup Final a favorite pastime an unexpected phone call abruptly upends his peaceful, solitary life, propelling Gunnar on a wild-goose chase to Berlin, Germany and onward to the Hawaiian Islands. Beguiled by Blue Paw, a young Burmese orphan with a distinct lunar personality, Gunnar travels deep into his own past, and the pasts of others, to learn the meaning of a certain illusory melody a melody that holds the secret to a bond forged in blood on the day before Operation Barbarossa, the German invasion of Soviet Russia. Hard-boiled, but with a magical twist, Moon River is the story of Blue Paw, an orphaned Burmese girl, whose preternatural ties to a young German soldier transcend the boundaries of time and the borders of countries. Moon River seamlessly merges three distinct narratives: a crime story...
