

The Gentleman from Indiana

By Booth Tarkington

Aegypan. Paperback. Condition: New. 232 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.5in. Booth Tarkington was an American novelist and dramatist from Indiana best known for his Pulitzer Prize winning novels Alice Adams and The Magnificent Ambersons, which also became a film by Orson Welles. Tarkington chronicled Midwestern American life, and the changes wrought by the economic boom times following the Civil War and up to World War I. The Gentleman from Indiana recounts the adventures of John Harkness, who graduates from Princeton University and takes over the ownership of a local newspaper in Plattville, Indiana. In the course of his efforts, he rejuvenates the paper, upsets the plans of local political tricksters, and helps bring to justice the White Caps, a gang from a neighboring community. But his efforts have gained him enemies who will use injury or death to stop him, and he despairs of the woman he loves returning his affections. Will justice prevail and love triumph?
