Excerpt from Our Vote: Citizens Individual and Collective Responsibility; Concluding With a Sketch of Theodore Roosevelt Our Federal Constitution, paramount over every State constitution, the basis of our laws throughout our country and the wise administration of them, has given to us manifold blessings during the six score and eight years of our country's history undreamed of in the records of human governments. Never let us forget, however, that these laws emanated from the people, through representatives elected by their votes, and that the people can only preserve and protect that Constitution, and always be secure in the use of the vote, by the proper use of the ballot, in electing proper men to the legislative, judicial and executive branches of our country. The voice of the people is made effective only through their votes. The votes of the people are the approval or disapproval of the Federal or State branch of the administration of their laws, delegated by the people to their representatives, respectively, under our dual system.
